AH, that's right. It was hidden. I forgot. And thanks for your response—I'll trust you on all this stuff! ☺

Hi Tim,

I understand. We actually didn't take the post down – we just hid it. People can still find it by search & it may still show up in people's newsfeeds. We just wanted to reduce the traffic to the sites until we can get the new site up.

As soon as the new site is live, I'll be posting it to the main FB & Twitter accounts. Then we'll want to RT & share those posts on the R6, R8, & R9 FB & Twitter, as well as the OW accounts. Since it's now a national/multi-regional response the post should come from the main accounts & then be shared from there. I'll let the rest of the community of practice know they can RT/share too if they want or are seeing comments/questions.

Hi Jess!

Some folks here are concerned that we took down both website links to Gold King Mine from the R8 Facebook page. We're afraid that it might look bad in the media or to the public.

But I'll let you be the judge on all this; I'm just a reporter and pawn! ☺

Also, I'm desperately hoping to get the official OK to make <http://www.epa.gov/goldkingmine> go live. Hopefully it will happen in a few minutes. And then maybe we could link to that site from the R8 Facebook page? And possibly the R6 and R9 FB pages?

Thanks!

Good afternoon,

As you probably know, we have an active response going on now in R6, R8, and R9. I know a lot of people are looking for information and we all want to be helpful.

Please hold on posting any social media related to this incident. We are in the process of working on messages that will be posted to the main Facebook and Twitter accounts. Once the posts are up on the main accounts, they can be retweeted or shared without adding any share or quote text.

Thanks! Jess
